Ten Lectures on Ancient Chinese Civilization (Collector's Edition)

The study of ancient Chinese civilization is a multidisciplinary and comprehensive study involving many fields such as history, archaeology, ancient literature, ancient philology, history of science and technology, history of art, and history of academic thought. It requires researchers to have a deep and solid grounding in ancient literature and to master a large amount of first-hand information, especially underground materials unearthed obtained by modern archaeological methods. Furthermore, it also requires them to use a wide range of comparison and rational thinking to have a comprehensive understanding and overall grasp of all these basic materials and related disciplines. The author of Ten Lectures on Ancient Chinese Civilization: Special Lectures by Famous Experts uses his rich accumulation of long-term work and unique experience in exploring this subject, and compiles ten sets of related works to form a systematic discussion on the topic of ancient Chinese civilization research.

The Key — The Communist Party of China and The Chinese Path

The key to managing affairs well in China is the Party. The leadership of the CPC is the defining feature of Chinese socialism and the greatest strength of this system, is vital for the future of the country, the nation, and the Party itself. How to combine the Party's century-long history with the logic of adapting Marxism to the Chinese context to see the era we live in today, how to interpret the multidimensional and complex relationship between the Party and the nation, how to understand the Party's mission and its role in the transformation of China's economic system, and how to recognize the central position of the CPC leadership in China's national governance system are the themes of the author's in-depth thinking.

Common Prosperity: Historical Origins and Realization Paths

This book systematically sorts out the common prosperity ideas contained in Chinese traditional culture, reveals the cultural code of the common prosperity ideas that have been passed down for thousands of years, and has a deep sense of historical depth. The book's discussion takes historical logic as the starting point, theoretical logic as the support, and the implementation path as the foothold. It has both theoretical depth and practical breadth, with a grand historical perspective, and fully reflects the principle of adapting the basic tenets of Marxism to China's specific realities and its fine traditional culture. It provides new ideas and inspiration for people to better grasp the scientific connotation of common prosperity and solidly promote common prosperity.

Political Economics of High-speed Railway

Since the 18th National Congress of the Communist Party of China, China's high-speed rail industry has made great progress and has gradually become a national heavyweight in serving national strategies. How to guide high-speed rail to play a strategic supporting role in the construction of a socialist modern economic power has become a major issue that needs to be urgently studied. However, the academic community has not yet included high-speed rail as a strategic support force for the construction of a modern economic powerhouse in its research vision. Guided by the principle of deepening reform internally and expanding opening up externally, we have designed two strategic support paths for the construction of a socialist modern economic powerhouse through high-speed rail, promoting the modernization of the economic system and creating a new pattern of opening up to the outside world.

A Concise History of Confucian Cultural Communication in Ancient Xinjiang

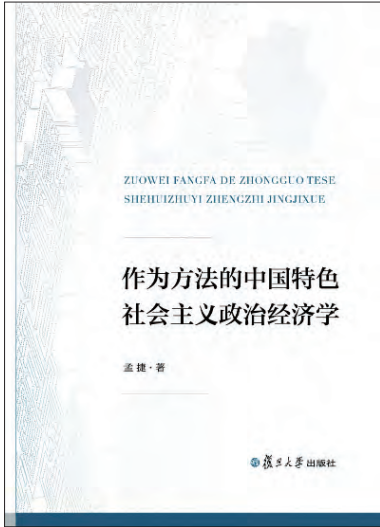

The book is the final result of the Western Region Project of the National Social Science Fund “Research on Confucian Cultural Communication in Ancient Xinjiang” (18XZS036). This book, in the order of Chinese dynasties, conducts a relatively comprehensive textual research on the spread and development of Confucian culture in Xinjiang during the Han Dynasty, Wei and Jin Dynasties, Sui and Tang Dynasties, Liao and Song Dynasties, Yuan Dynasty, Ming and Qing Dynasties. Whether in the period of great unification or in the period of national division and separatism, the Confucian culture in Xinjiang has never been interrupted. This was because of the support from the Central Plains government, the inheritance of Central Plains immigrants, and more importantly, the acceptance and learning of Confucian culture by the multi-ethnic people in Xinjiang. The spread and development of Confucian culture in Xinjiang not only expanded the influence of Confucian culture, but also played an important role in promoting cultural exchanges between the ancient Central Plains and border areas, laying an important cultural foundation for the formation and development of the Chinese nation’s sense of community.

Online Silk Road Finance

This book is the final result of the National Social Science Fund annual project “Research on the Silk Road Economic Belt Financial Cooperation Mechanism Based on the Internet” (No. 16BJY180). The research theme is “Silk Road Finance”, and the research focus is the Silk Road financial cooperation mechanism based on the Internet. Taking the “Belt and Road” and the changes in the international landscape as the background of the times, international financial theory, regional financial theory and international financial cooperation experience as references, and combining with the actual financial development of countries along the Silk Road, this book conducts a systematic and multi-dimensional qualitative description and quantitative analysis of Silk Road currency, Silk Road finance, and Silk Road financial cooperation. Based on the Internet technology platform and new thinking, it focuses on the study of the “online” Silk Road financial cooperation mechanism. Starting from the basic feasibility conditions of Silk Road financial cooperation, this research analyzes the bottlenecks and obstacles of Silk Road financial cooperation, reveals the influencing factors and overall characteristics of Silk Road financial cooperation based on the Internet, focuses on the framework design of the Silk Road financial cooperation mechanism, and proposes the construction strategy and implementation suggestions for the “two-wheel drive” Silk Road financial cooperation mechanism based on the combination of “online” and “offline” of Internet.

New Sense of Place in Locative Media

Using people's daily experiences as a starting point to examine the use of location functions on mobile applications, this book seeks to explore theoretical discussions on how location-based media has reshaped the relationship between people and places, activated and reproduced new places. The author believes that locative media resets the perception of bodily space and urban spatiality, becoming the key to igniting a series of social practices in contemporary urban spaces. In the realm of locative space, people become living cursors, and cities become living interfaces. The interaction between the cursor and the body, and the mutual definition shared between online space and physical space, prompts us to rethink the sense of both place and place practices in the mobile digital age.

Belief on Jade Myth and the Spirit of China

The author presents a new theoretical proposition that Jade Culture was the First Unifying Movement in China. He systematically expounds the evolution and mythological coding significance of various jade artifacts made from jade such as discs, figures, handled objects, ornaments, dragons, weapons, and rabbits. The book explains the trajectory of succession and transformation from jade to metal worship, traces the contextual causal derivation from prehistoric jade worship to Confucianism (the virtue of gentlemen compared to jade), Taoism (Jade Emperor), and Buddhism (jade Buddha and jade Guanyin). It aims to fill the gaps in indigenous perspectives in both intellectual and philosophical history, guiding a renewed understanding and self-awareness of Huaxia culture. It also explores manifestations of the Tao in objects and delves into the unknown prehistoric belief-driven role behind the familiar jade mythology, revealing the cultural connotations of jade as an intermediary sacred object and the mythological origin of the concept of unity of heaven and man, unraveling the roots of the spirit of China.

Ancient and Modern Editions: A Comprehensive Study of Existing Versions of "A Commentary on the Waterways Classic"

Written by Li Daoyuan of the Northern Wei dynasty, A Commentary on the Waterways Classic is the most famous ancient Chinese classic that recorded regional geographical information based on waterways. Since Song dynasty, this classic has had a complex system of editions during the process of transcription and engraving. Inspired by Mr. Hu Shi's decades-long study of A Commentary on the Waterways Classic and his idea of restoring ancient editions, this book proposes the viewpoints of "ancient edition system" and "modern edition system", selects twenty-nine representative versions of the commentary, conducts in-depth research and makes comparisons on each, ultimately clarifying their respective evolutions. With more than three hundred images, the different versions can "speak" for themselves. In this way, the major issues existing in the different versions of A Commentary on the Waterways Classic are expected to be fully solved, and therefore provide reference for interested scholars.

A Direct Interpretation of The Book of Songs (Two Volumes)

Mr. Chen Zizhan was deeply involved in the study of the Book of Songs all his lifetime. This book is his masterpiece on the Book of Songs. The book is divided into 30 volumes, and each chapter consists of five parts: the original text, the modern translation, chapter notes, explanations, and annotations. The original text and the modern translation are compared in two columns to increase readability. The translation strives to be correct and fluent, while preserving its original flavor; the chapter notes briefly analyze the chapter organization, literary thought, word choice and rhyme of each chapter of the original text, either adopting established theories or expressing one's own ideas. Meanwhile, the explanations conduct a comprehensive and in-depth discussion on the writing theme, author, writing time, social background, etc. of each chapter, striving to get close to the original meaning of the poem. The annotations collect the established theories of the predecessors, especially attach importance to the research results of the masters of plain learning in the Qing Dynasty, and adopt the new views of modern people, and take a broad view and select them for readers' reference. The book is extensive in citations, rigorous in research and discussion, and has many original findings, which has high academic value.

About the Author

Chen Zizhan (1896-1990) was born in Changsha, Hunan. His original name was Bingkun and his pen name was Chu Kuang. Graduated from the Department of Education of Southeast University, he once served as a professor at Nanguo Art Institute, China Public School, Hujiang University, and director of the Chinese Department of Fudan University. Specializing in Chinese pre-Qin literature, he devoted his life to the study of The Book of Songs and Chu Ci. His works "A Direct Interpretation of The Book of Songs" and "A Direct Interpretation of The Songs of Chu" summarize old learning and integrate new knowledge, which are important results of current research in this field. He is also the author of "History of Literature of the Tang and Song Dynasties" and "History of Chinese Literature in the Past Thirty Years".

A Direct Interpretation of Chu Ci

The book is divided into two parts: “Direct Interpretation” and “Explanation of Problems”. The “Direct Interpretation” part consists of the original text, modern translation, chapter notes, modern notes, and simple notes. The original text and modern translation are presented in left and right columns for comparison and easy browsing; the translation strives to be appropriate and combines spoken dialects, close to modern vernacular poetry; the chapter notes briefly analyze the logical development of each chapter of the original text, the content of the work, its creation period, the authenticity of the work, etc.; the modern notes conduct a comprehensive and in-depth discussion on the writing purpose and social background of each chapter; the simple notes make concise explanations of the words, names, objects, allusions, etc. in the original text. The “Explanation of Problems” part conducts in-depth analysis and research on some major issues in the research history of each chapter of Chu Ci, especially some issues that were generally controversial in academia at that time, and has achieved fruitful academic results. The book can play a certain auxiliary role in helping common readers understand Chu Ci and students of related majors to enter the systematic research of Chu Ci.

“Classic Reading” book series

This series of books is mainly designed for medium-level Chinese learners, and is recommended by famous scholars with wide influences in middle school Chinese education (Liang Heng, Bao Pengshan, Dai Jianye, etc.). This series of publications is named “Classic Reading”, which has two meanings. Firstly, “classic” means all the works selected in this series must be classics or are classical. Secondly, “class reading”, that is, interpreting classics in the form of “class”. The class here mainly draws on a certain form of “class”, such as popular and fluent expression, systematic knowledge structure, horizontal migration, expansion and vertical exploration on a certain issue, etc. The “Classic Reading” series is mainly for primary and secondary school students. New books will be introduced continuously.

Classic Reading 1: 11 Lessons on Intensive Reading of Shishuo Xinyu (A New Account of Tales of the World)

Shishuo Xinyu (A New Account of Tales of the World) is a representative work of “note novels” during the Wei, Jin, Southern and Northern Dynasties in China, and is the earliest collection of classical Chinese novels in the country. Written by Liu Yiqing, Nobleman of Linchuan in the Southern Song Dynasty, it mainly records the words, deeds and anecdotes of some celebrities from the late Eastern Han Dynasty to the Wei and Jin Dynasties. This book is divided into 11 lessons for guided reading, each on a special topic. It mainly offers three solutions as follows. 1. Through overall introduction of Shishuo Xinyu, familiarize readers (mainly middle school students) with traditional Chinese classics. 2. Through integration, classification and interpretation of specific chapters, this book enables students to understand the general features of Wei and Jin Dynasties’ culture, which will also enrich their historical knowledge and improve their thinking and ability to analyze texts, thus ultimately improve reading skills. 3. Explain the language arts and literary value of Shishuo Xinyu, so that students can appreciate the beauty of words and accumulate necessary language materials.

Classic Reading 6: 10 Lectures on Intensive Reading of Lao She (Part 1)

The class reader of this book will start from Lao She’s life and creation, connecting the ups and downs of Lao She’s life with his literary creation history. The reader will also go back to the starting point of Lao She’s creation — Lao Zhang’s Philosophy, Zhao Ziyue and Er Ma, classifying the ways of world in his works. The reader will guide a intensive reading focusing on the pinnacle work of his late period — Teahouse, and interpret the underlying meaning of Teahouse in ten chapters. Social changes over half a century can be seen from the ups and downs of people from all walks of life who regularly go to the teahouse. This book contains excerpts of Teahouse. The class reader has many years of middle school teaching experience. During careful reading of the text, he not only pays attention to inspiring students’ problem awareness, but also teaches students reading methods.

History of Migration in China (Seven Volumes, Ten Books)

Ge Jianxiang

The book studies the history of migration within China from ancient times to the late twentieth century. It details major migration movements in each period, including causes, dates, places they moving from and to, migration routes and directions, settlement processes, and the resulting impact. It aims to provide the most comprehensive and systematic history of Chinese migration to date, serving as a reference and a textbook for professionals in fields such as history, demographics, geography, sociology, economics, culture, ethnicity, and local history, as well as for government agencies and academic researchers.

The book is divided into seven volumes: the first volume is an introduction and chronology, and the second to seventh volumes are respectively from pre-Qin to the Wei, Jin, South-North-Dynasties, the Sui, Tang and Five Dynasties, the Liao, Song, Jin and Yuan, Ming, Qing, and late Qing to the end of the 20th century. The volumes are written in a uniform style, but are relatively independent, and their research process and writing structure have their own emphasis depending on the migration situation in different periods.

History of Migration in China (Volume I): Introduction and Chronology of Events

This volume (History of Migration in China Volume I) is an introduction and chronology of the book, focusing on the basic theory, definition, method and significance of studying the history of migration in China written by the author, clarifying the requirements for the scope, breadth and depth of time and space of the study of history of Migration in China, and also includes a detailed chronology of the history of migration, which can be read as an outline of the whole book, and is also an important reference tool for peers in related disciplines.

Ten Lectures on Rhetoric

The ten lectures in this book cover not only the core theoretical issues of rhetoric research, such as rhetoric and cognitive thinking, the ethics of rhetoric, and the division of rhetoric, but also the practical level of rhetoric, such as rhetoric and translation, rhetoric and artistic conception creation, the construction and deconstruction of rhetorical texts, rhetoric and political practice, and the economic benefits of rhetoric. In addition, it also directly faces the reality of the new technological revolution and the Internet era, discussing the relationship between the development of communication media and rhetorical creation. Besides its focus on the frontier of academic research and the broadening the academic horizons of scholars, this book also takes into account practical applications. It has specially set up two parts, “Foreword” and “Conclusion”, which briefly discuss the three basic functions of rhetoric as well as the methods and ways to achieve specific rhetorical goals, providing beginners with introductory guidance so that “witty words” and “wonderful writing” are no longer unattainable goals.

Ten Lectures on General Theory of Song Dynasty Literature

Based on a macroscopic examination of Song-style culture and Song Dynasty literature, this book conducts in-depth exploration into the characteristics and status of Song Dynasty literature from the aspects of style, genre, thought, genre, and academic history. This book has made significant revisions to the “General Theory of Song Dynasty Literature” published in 1997, mainly adding three major aspects: one is “Zen monk literature in the Song Dynasty”, the second is “Neo-Confucian poetry in the Song Dynasty”, and the third is “Popular literature in the Song Dynasty”. This has further optimized and enriched the structure and content, and at the same time highlights the significance of Song Dynasty in the evolution of literature from elegance to vulgarity. This book is of great value for the research, popularization, and improvement of understanding of Song Dynasty literature and history, and even traditional culture.

The Chinese-English Dictionary (Unabridged, Vol. I & II)

Major Project of the National Social Science Fund of China
National Publication Fund Project

National Dictionary Compilation and Publication Planning Project (2013-2025)

The Dictionary adopts a principle of “descriptivism with a grain of salt” for its compilation and employs a broad approach to word selection. It includes entry words from both classical and modern Chinese, incorporating semantic and phonetic interpretations plus morphological illustrations, and tracing etymological and evolutionary information when necessary. Also included are expressions and usages from overseas Chinese communities worldwide. The senses are accurately delineated and comprehensive, with authentic examples cited from a myriad of classical and modern sources. In addition to fidelity and accuracy in translation, The Dictionary aims at translation beyond equivalence and acculturation. Considering the needs of foreigners learning and using Chinese, The Dictionary provides etymological information for core Chinese characters, and culture-loaded entries such as idioms, common sayings, and familiar expressions are treated in such a way as to include literal meanings, background cultural information, as well as useful and carefully crafted translations.

Modern Health Economics

The book has five distinct features: comprehensive, innovative, high-quality, distinctive, and practical. It is comprehensive in its coverage of life cycle health services, universal health insurance systems, and Universal Health Coverage (UHC); It is innovative as signified by its integration with China's health reform practices, reflecting people-centered values, including recent national strategies like health poverty alleviation and health well-being. Its high-quality and value is indicated by its use as a reference book, combining health economics with health policy. This book is distinctive as it goes beyond traditional boundaries of health economics, incorporating concepts related to a healthy China and health-related economics. It is practical because it emphasizes on combining theory with practice, and provides detailed methodology and case studies. As the most comprehensive and authoritative work on health economics in China today, this book is expected to become a classic that drives the development of our country's medical and health system.

Fundamentals and Practice of Blockchain Technology

Blockchain, also known as distributed ledger technology, first conceptually appeared in digital currency known as Bitcoin. With various types of encrypted digital currencies entering the public sphere, blockchain technology has demonstrated its significance as the infrastructure of digital currency. Blockchain is a comprehensive technology that includes various basic background technologies. It adopts a decentralized architecture maintained by multiple parties, ensuring transmission and access security through cryptography. It provides capabilities such as consistent data storage, tamper resistance, non-repudiation, and smart contracts. This book introduces the concept, key features, basic technologies, mainstream development platforms, and foundational knowledge required for the development of blockchain. It can be used as a textbook for blockchain technology and as a reference for blockchain fundamentals.
